BACKGROUND ON DRUG COURTS

A Drug Court is a special court given the responsibility to handle cases involving less serious drug-using offenders through an intensive supervision and treatment program. Because the criminal justice system often fails to subject non-violent, substance-abusing delinquent offenders to intervention measures that provide the sanctions and services necessary to change their deviant behaviors, many of these individuals repeatedly cycle through out courts, corrections, and probation systems. Basic criteria for drug court participation include first time, non-violent delinquent offenders who are charged with drug possession, use, or who have drug use as a substantial part of their history. Other participants may have no more than one prior felony conviction and be eligible for standard probation.

While drug court programs differ nationwide, most programs are comprehensive and divided into sequential phases, utilizing closely supervised probation, mandatory drug testing, individual and group treatment, involvement in support services, family therapy and community service. Complying with requirements within each phase completes each phase. The key difference between Drug Court and other intensive supervision probation programs is its system of immediate yet graduated sanctions for noncompliance, recognizing that the recovery process may involve some continued drug use. The participants remain in the program for a minimum of 9 months (average length of stay is 12 months), requiring less frequent drug testing, group counseling services and contact with probation officers and judge as participants' progress through the phases.

The populations and caseloads of most juvenile courts in the U.S. have changed dramatically during the past decade. The nature of both the delinquent acts and dependency matters being handled have become far more complex, entailing more serious and delinquent criminal activity and escalating degrees of substance abuse. Problems that bring a juvenile under the court's jurisdiction are interrelated with those of his/her family, particularly with regard to substance abuse.

The development of juvenile drug courts has, therefore, required special strategies to address these – and other – issues emerging during the course of program planning and implementation. While the hallmark of juvenile drug courts operating to date has been flexibility, the following are characteristics common to their approaches:

- much earlier and more comprehensive intake assessments,
- much greater focus on the functioning of the juvenile's family, as well as the juvenile throughout the juvenile court process,
- much closer integration of the information obtained during the assessment process as it relates to the juvenile and his/her family,
- much greater coordination between the court, the treatment community, the school system and other community agencies in responding to the needs of the juvenile and the court, and
- much more active and continuous judicial supervision of the juvenile's case and the treatment process.

Juvenile drug courts are using a variety of strategies to achieve these goals, including developing systems of triage applied to intake to better utilize community services; recognizing and responding to the cultural diversity of children involved in court proceedings and the environments in which they live; and treating children and families holistically, e.g. overcoming the dichotomy between juvenile delinquency and family/dependency matters and providing substance abuse treatment that addresses family issues.

SCOPE OF WORK FOR TREATMENT SERVICES FOR THE JUVENILE DRUG COURT IN EL PASO, TEXAS

EL PASO COUNTY'S JUVENILE DRUG COURT

Juvenile drug court treatment services are not confined to the treatment provider, all activities generated by the juvenile drug court are designed to have a therapeutic value, including the interaction between "treatment" and "court" processes which is on-going. Among the special attributes of juvenile drug court treatment services are (1) very early and extensive assessment of the juvenile and his/her family situation; (2) providing treatment programs that are evidenced based, developmentally based, gender specific, and culturally appropriate, (3) incorporating an "outreach" component to the assessment and treatment processes that includes periodic visits to the home to assess the family situation; and (4) addressing school performance, peer relationships and self-esteem issues regarding the juvenile participant, in addition to his/her family situation.

The Juvenile Drug Court program is designed to work with post-adjudicated male and female juveniles who are between 14-17 years of age and who have demonstrated an extensive substance abuse history, are in need of intensive outpatient services or residential treatment, and intensive court supervision with frequent drug testing. There will be two gender specific groups with a maximum of 12 participants in each at any point in time, thus facilitating the opportunity to provide the appropriate services to each population. We are seeking an average of 4 hours of group therapy and one hour of individual therapy every other week or weekly dependent on the treatment plan. The ability to provide transportation services to and from treatment services is desirable. The program is approximately 9-12 months with a required 3-month probation aftercare component. The drug court participants and drug court team will be required to meet once every week for a court review hearing with the Judge, participants and parents/guardians.

El Paso County's Juvenile Drug Court program will be used as an integral component within the juvenile justice system that exists in the county. This program will address and provide group and individual counseling by licensed therapists/counselors (LCDC's or LPC's with a specialty in substance abuse counseling) in a facility licensed by the Department of State Health Services (DSHS) managed by selected agency; mediation for juveniles; individual treatment plans within 30 days after entering the program and every 90 days thereafter with documentation provided to the special programs coordinator; provide performance measurement information as requested by the Court and/or special programs coordinator. Services are to include: substance abuse intervention/education, relapse prevention curriculum, social/life skills groups (using community resources); gender-specific groups (Girls Circle and Boys Council); awareness of educational alternatives; and programs that work toward building trust and positive problem-solving skills (MRT Cognitive Behavioral therapy). Age- and gender-specific issues will be addressed with a focus on cultural awareness. The "Girls Circle and Boys Council Curriculum" will be incorporated into the gender specific programming. Advancements will be dependent upon program participation and clean drug screens. The juvenile drug court Judge, probation officers, and program coordinator will be kept informed regarding progress and compliance of all participants via weekly written court reports.

Professionals/speakers from the community will be identified by the provider to speak with the youth about parenting, health, and education issues. Participants will be exposed to experiential activities to increase their trust and problem-solving behaviors including discussions concerning the use of alcohol and drugs and their effects on the juvenile physiologically, psychologically, and socially.

The Juvenile Drug Court treatment component will be a court-supervised program that will provide:

- Intensive/supportive outpatient drug treatment services for up to 30-35 juvenile offenders per year on a tiered intensity matrix,
- phased treatment modalities including Moral Recognition Therapy (MRT) addressing cognitive, motivation, and behavioral modification therapies and a faith based component if beneficial to the population being served,
- Individual therapy, Drug Counseling, Experiential Therapeutic Approaches
- Gender specific services – Girls Circle/Boys Council Curriculums
- assist with the monitoring and supervision of juvenile offenders while in treatment in conjunction with Juvenile Probation, El Paso Police Department, and the County Attorney's Office.
- Relapse Prevention Curriculum integrated into treatment model.
