

You may qualify for reduced or terminated sentence.

MANDATORY JUDICIAL REVIEW

Pursuant to changes in the TCCP, Article 42.12, Section 20(a), which went into effect September 1, 2007, upon completion of one-half of the original community supervision period or two years of community supervision, whichever is more, the judge shall review the probationer's record and consider whether to reduce or terminate the period of community supervision, unless the probationer is delinquent in paying required restitution, fines, costs, or fees and the probationer has the ability to pay or the probationer has not completed court-ordered counseling or treatment.

All eligible cases that have completed one half of the original community supervision period or two years, whichever is more, will be screened by the West Texas Community Supervision and Corrections Department for eligibility for review by the Court.
